

Daily Legislative Update

Thursday, January 31, 2019

It appears that we've reached the other side of the infamous Polar Vortex....for now. And although the temperatures outside were below zero all day yesterday, the General Assembly was firing on all cylinders. Without a full chamber session on the day's schedule, it allowed committees from both houses to hear testimony on a number of bills and send those that were amended and approved onto their next legislative stop.

Today's schedule will be light in comparison, but legislators will remain focused on hearing as many bills as possible before heading home for the weekend. Both Houses will hold committee meetings this morning and gather for session later in the day. House Session will begin at 11:00AM, Senate at 1:00PM. Both meetings will be available to view via the webcast links below.
