

Daily Legislative Update

Tuesday, February 26, 2019

With just a few hours left in the legislative session's first half, Indiana lawmakers will meet today to tie up loose ends and prepare for what awaits come next week. Today also serves as 3rd reading deadline for the Senate and the final opportunity for bills to be voted out before halftime. Just over 50 bills are scheduled to be heard by the chamber's full body.

Yesterday members of the House successfully voted out their chamber's version of the biennial budget and now shift their focus to the laundry list of bills that were voted out from their counterparts in the Senate. They will dedicate much of their time today assigning the aforementioned bills to their respective committees.

As previously mentioned, neither the House or Senate will hold committee meetings this week but will gather for a 10AM session today to close out the abbreviated work week. Both houses will then return to the Statehouse on Monday to begin what is sure to be an action packed second half of session.

Any and all bills that did not make it through 3rd reading in either house will now be eliminated from your individual bill track lists. You can expect reports to be delivered tomorrow afternoon following today's session.
