

Daily Legislative Update

Thursday, April 11, 2019

It's been an eventful week inside the Indiana Statehouse and today, the General Assembly will close it out with a handful of conference committees and session. Today is also the committee report deadline for all House bills in the Senate. This means that after today, all bills that are continuing on in the legislative process will have cleared committees and made their way to each chamber's floor for further debate. Keep in mind that even bills that did not receive hearings in the second house may still have their individual language inserted into other bills, so be on the lookout for the slew of amendments that continue to be introduced.

Legislators will have a modified schedule today and for most of this session's remainder now that conference committees have arrived. With that said, session for the House will get an early start this morning at 9AM, the Senate will meet later at 1:30PM. In between those meetings, HB 1056, SB 133 and HB 1196 will all be heard and amended in conference committees. Each of these can be live streamed by using the committee webcasts links below.

The Senate Appropriations Committee will also meet today at 9AM and will give us the first look at HB 1001 following the changes that have been made by Chairman Mishler and his Senate colleagues. This version of the bill will be the starting point for discussion during its eventual conference committee and will play a vital role in the negotiations made between House and Senate conferees.
