

Daily Legislative Update

Friday, April 12, 2019

The legislature will not meet for session today but many members, especially those in the House of Representatives, should be in full support of a day off. Yesterday, session in the House went well into the evening hours as SB7 (Capital Improvement Board) and SB552 (Gaming bill) saw numerous amendments introduced and subsequent debate regarding each proposal. In the end, both bills advanced and will now move onto the next stop in the legislative process. We now have just two full weeks of session left before Sine Die, so expect there to be even more long days ahead.

Following yesterday's completion, all Senate bills in the House will now have to have cleared 2nd reading in its chamber to move on this session. The Senate's 2nd reading deadline will arrive on Monday and thus require all House bills to also have cleared this step in the legislative process by day's end. As bills continue to advance, more conference committee appointments, dates and times will be posted online. To find this information, follow the Conference tab under the Committee section on the IGA's site.
