

Daily Legislative Update

Monday, April 15, 2019

For the second to last time this session, the General Assembly returns after a weekend away from the Statehouse and will dive back in as the finish line draws near. Barring unforeseen circumstances (see last year's session), we now have just eight session days remaining on this year's calendar. Stay tuned as these next two weeks are sure to have their fair share of fireworks.

Today is also the 3rd reading deadline for all Senate bills currently in the House. By days end, Representatives will have sifted through the hundreds of proposals originally introduced in their chamber and sent a small number of those bills on to the final stages of the legislative process. Now it is in the hands of conference committees and Governor Holcomb who is ultimately the final stop.

Tomorrow will be the Senate's 3rd reading deadline, so expect members to be working through today and the evening hours to follow suit with their colleagues across the hall.

The House will gather for session this morning at 10AM and the Senate later on at 1:30PM. In between, there will be a handful of conference committees set to meet. To view these committee meetings and their appointees along with all other conference committees, please use the new link titled CONFERENCE COMMITTEE SCHEDULE below.
