

Daily Legislative Update

Tuesday, April 16, 2019

As anticipated, yesterday the General Assembly hit the ground running and were engaged in debate from the morning hours well into the evening. With HB1001 up for 2nd reading in the Senate, members sat through nearly seven hours of proposed amendments and subsequent debate. When the dust settled, amendments were, for the most part, passed (or defeated) along party lines. There were however a select few amendments from the Democratic caucus that were adopted to the budget and will now be deliberated further in conference committee.

Ten more bills are scheduled for conference committees today, with the first being SB518 (Probate matters) at 8:30AM. This committee and all others set to meet can have their meeting live streamed in its entirety by utilizing the conference committee schedule listed below.

The House will mirror yesterday's schedule and meet for session at 10AM today and the Senate will follow suit, meeting at the same time. For those following along at home, caucus meetings for both houses have run well over anticipated times so expect session start times to vary depending on each floor's agenda.
