

Daily Legislative Update

Wednesday, April 24, 2019

We have finally reached the (anticipated) end of the legislative session! And in order for members of the General Assembly to close things out as planned, many will need to fight off some sleepy eyes. This is due to yesterday's activity running well into the night, with the final gavel falling just after 10PM. Before adjourning, leadership from both houses expressed to members that they should come back this morning ready to hit the ground running so that they may tie a bow on this year's legislative business.

Headlining yesterday's chaos within the state's capital was the release of the final state budget proposal. In it, legislators laid out their two year plan on where every state dollar down to the last cent will be allocated. The final product was the result of months of collaborative work from each of the four caucuses and will help fund hundreds of programs statewide. For an in depth look at the latest budget proposal, please utilize the link below titled State Budget Proposal.

Expect a fluid schedule today, with a number of meetings being posted throughout the day and little notice of said postings. As previously mentioned there will be a great deal of time spent in caucus meetings where members from both houses will engage in final negotiations on all remaining bills, so meeting times will most likely be adjusted. For the most up to date schedules, follow along with the conference committee and each floor's schedules below.
